With the new Kontakt 4, you can mix and match a great library of incredible sound modules with full support for multisampling, reverb, and other effects in all major DAWs. New Instruments In addition to the entire range of instruments available in the Kontakt 5 library, new instruments are also available in Kontakt 4. The most notable additions include a brand new lead synth called the Tone Squeezer, a lead guitar featuring a great high end EQ and compressor, a powerful overdrive, and harmonizer, and an instrument that simulates a mellotron string ensemble. The Tone Squeezer and Melodic Reverb are great for modulating and bending lead synth lines. Tone Squeezer A great new feature in the new Kontakt 4 library is the Tone Squeezer, a new lead synth inspired by the sounds of a classic Moog tone block. The Tone Squeezer is a tube-driven unit that provides six oscillators, each with an independent filter, envelope generator, LFO, and reverb. The Tone Squeezer features two modes of operation: either with its own reverb, or in combination with any of the Kontakt instruments' reverb effects. New features The newer version also features two new Lead Guitar simulations: the C45 and the C95. The C45 is a detailed, multi-scale ensemble of reverb, distortion, and a frequency shifter modeled on the 1980s classic Fender Twin Reverb. The C95 is a more aggressive blend of the C45's characteristics, including a high amount of overdrive and slightly less reverb. The instruments also contain two new EQs: one of high and medium frequencies, and one of low frequencies. Both EQs can be blended to get the best sound from the instrument. Mellotron String Ensemble Kontakt 4 also features a powerful new Mellotron String Ensemble. The Mellotron is a sampling of a real Mellotron string ensemble modeled on the real instrument used by Mike Oldfield for the track "The Wind Blows Wild" from the album Tubular
