Although high-dose triiodothyronine (T3) has been used successfully in the treatment of hyperthyroidism, there is very little information available regarding its use in the treatment of metastatic disease. We present a patient who developed metastatic medullary carcinoma of the thyroid and successfully responded to the treatment with T3. A 65-year-old man developed thyroid-stimulating hormone (TSH)-independent thyroid cancer, which was treated with a combination of surgery and radioiodine ablation. After 1 year, metastatic disease was demonstrated in the lung and also in the bone marrow. He was treated with T3 100 micrograms/kg intravenously three times weekly for 6 months. This resulted in the disappearance of bone pain and significant improvement in his performance status. A low plasma level of TSH was demonstrated by immunometric assay in the patient and in his family. T3 has been shown to be effective in the treatment of hyperthyroidism when given in high doses. Its use in the treatment of metastatic thyroid cancer in a patient with a high level of TSH should be considered. Friedrich Wilhelm Maassen Friedrich Wilhelm Maassen (1814–1878) was a German painter, artist and graphic artist. He was born in Bonn, Rhineland. Biography He was the son of the painter, Johann Hermann Maassen, and like his father, was a student of the Bonn Academy. He later received an art education in Paris from 1832 to 1833. During his time in Paris, he painted a landscape "Le Sabotage", which was later exhibited in the "Salon" of 1840. Upon his return to Germany, Maassen worked in Munich and Altenburg. He was active as a portrait painter, and exhibited at the Munich Secession. He died in Munich in 1878. References Johann Christoph von Hockemeyer. Werkverzeichnis der Druckgraphik aus Wien.
