FlameIO is a command line utility that allows you to make your images/video/audio files less vulnerable to fire, and to make them even invisible. Fast, yet secure network file transfer First, to start with, FlameIO has multiple protocols to provide high-speed, reliable, and secure file transfer. The first two protocols supported are FTP and SFTP. To use the FTP protocol, the following parameters need to be set, depending on what protocol you would like to use: -P: TCP or UDP -L: Passive or Active -T: SSL or TLS (TCP only) -U: URL or file path -S: Server: User name and password (or key), if allowed -R: Redirect -F: Filename: Specifies the file name that you would like to upload, or the directory that you would like to transfer into -T: Transfer type: This is the type of data you would like to transfer. You can use one of the following values: C, T, A, P, G, or Z -c: Change to directory -d: Delete file -i: Execute program on remote system (default) -x: Execute program on local system (default) -z: Execute program on remote system (default) -f: File names to transfer -T: File types to transfer: You can use one of the following values: a, c, f, or t. If you specify a file, it will overwrite any existing file with the same name on the remote server. If you specify f, all files matching that pattern will be uploaded. If you specify t, all files matching that pattern will be downloaded. -O: Overwrite the destination file -L: Local path: Specifies the local directory where the file will be downloaded to, or uploaded if the -U option is specified -U: URL path: Specifies the URL or file path of the remote file to transfer -H: Host name and port: Specifies the IP address and port of the remote file to transfer -P: TCP or UDP protocol: Specifies the protocol that will be used for the connection -V: Verbosity (optional): Sets the level of verbosity output -X: Disables compression on upload -C: Disables compression on download Network bandwidth-intensive synchronization tasks can take a long time when you work with large amounts of files on your computer. However, since FlameIO uses multiple protocols that are fast and secure, it becomes very easy to transfer large numbers of files between computers at a very fast speed. In addition, the program is equipped with a built-in file synchronization tool, so you can work with a list of files that have been transferred using the tool, and later restore these files using the --restore option.
