On suspicion of embezzlement by a church member, the elders of the church of the Epistle to the Heirs of Jesus Christ (AEon) decided to excommunicate him. They reasoned that since he was a peritiakos, he was still an active member of the church. Even though it was probable that he was himself the culprit, they were afraid that he could taint their case against other involved church members. I also heard from someone, "Even if the brother is guilty of high treason, it is better that he be restored to fellowship than that we excommunicate our elders and rob the church of any future case or lawsuit." In spite of all of this, and finally against the elders' advice, we did call our brothers to a meeting and told them to come. It was no easy task, for it was near the time of the feast of the Epistle to the Heirs of Jesus Christ. Some of them
